1.0 EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

AGW completed the pavement assessment of streets in Alamosa County, Colorado. The following study summarizes the data collected, pavement condition, interpretation of pavement thickness, assets inventory, and considerations for maintenance and rehabilitation.

Based on our pavement evaluation, the Pavement Condition Index (PCI) ranges from 19 to 100 with an average of 65. A PCI of 65 indicates the pavement is in fair condition. Based on the pavement roughness survey, the International Roughness Index (IRI) ranges from 30 to 450 with an average of 230. An IRI of 230 indicates poor riding conditions. The ground penetrating radar (GPR) interpretation indicated pavement thicknesses ranging from 1.5 to 8.5 inches of asphalt with an average of 5.1 inches. A total of 1,368 signs and approximately 175 miles of pavement markings were inventoried.

Recommendations to improve the condition of the pavement are contained in this study. We encourage the Client to read this study in its entirety and not rely solely on the cursory information contained in this summary.

2.0 PROJECT SCOPE

Representatives from Alamosa County recognized the importance of evaluating pavement conditions to preserve existing infrastructure and to implement maintenance and rehabilitation alternatives. A representative from Alamosa County contacted AGW to assist in evaluating the street network currently maintained by the County. Our pavement evaluation consisted of using automated data collection methods to collect data pertaining to pavement distress, ride quality, and pavement depth. This information is used to determine pavement condition ratings which facilitate developing maintenance and rehabilitation planning. The asset inventory survey consisted of gathering signs and pavement markings. Our scope of work included collecting data using AGW's Road Doctor Survey Vehicle (RDSV), street unit quantities, inventory of signs and pavement markings, general comments on potential maintenance, and rehabilitation. This study was performed in general conformance with our Proposal Number 233607, dated September 1, 2023.

3.0 BACKGROUND

Alamosa County is located in the southern portion of Colorado between the Great Sand Dunes National Park and Preserve and the Rio Grande National Forest. Based on Census information, the County has a population of approximately 17,000 and extends approximately 724 square miles. The County has approximately 430 lane miles of paved streets, mostly with two travel lanes, no curb and gutter, limited shoulder spacing, with drainage ditches. Based on our observations, the pavement has been maintained with surface seals, crack sealing, patching, and occasional mill and overlays.

4.0 FIELD DATA COLLECTION

Asset and pavement data was collected on all Alamosa County maintained streets. Alamosa County's street network consists of the 207 segments shown on Figures 1 through 4. The data was collected in two visits, from April 22 to May 3, 2024, and October 21 to October 28, 2024. Most of the street network was surveyed in one direction. A description of the RDSV is provided below.

4.1 Equipment – RDSV

The RDSV unit is designed to collect data needed for evaluation of pavement conditions. The RDSV unit uses several sensors to measure pavement condition parameters and make a reliable assessment of the pavement. The system features include (shown on Figure 4-1):

- Road Doctor® CamLink system allows analysis of pavement distress/damage in real time at driving speed and confirmed by digital video
- A 3D accelerometer mounted on the rear axle of the vehicle is used to collect roughness data to calculate the IRI of the pavement
- A 2D laser scanner evaluates pavement rut depths
- Road Doctor® software products for data collection, handling, and processing
- A GPR unit equipped with 1-2 horn antennas and one 400 MHz antenna to survey pavement structure depth and condition

The positioning of the data is measured through the RDSV multi-component positioning system which utilizes a GPS unit and IMU (Inertial Measurement Unit) along with optical encoders and a distance measurement instrument (DMI). Reliable positioning can also be measured from the video and laser scanner data. The laser scanner data provides versatile outputs for digitalization of the streets and their surroundings.

5.0 PAVEMENT AND ASSET EVALUATION METHODS

5.1 PCI Evaluation

The PCI is a rating scale representing the condition of the pavement from 0 to 100. The PCI aids pavement engineers in determining maintenance and rehabilitation alternatives to improve pavement condition and rideability. The PCI analysis was performed in general conformance with the "Standard Practice for Roads and Parking Lots Pavement Condition Index Surveys (ASTM D6433)". Pavements are divided into randomly selected segments and evaluated to determine distress severity. The distress quantities are then used to determine PCI values to a 95% confidence level. The following pavement distresses are categorized as low, medium, and high severity and measured in feet (ft) and square feet (ft²).

- Alligator Cracking (ft²)
- Bleeding (ft²)
- Block Cracking (ft²)
- Bumps/Sags (ft)
- Corrugation (ft²)
- Depression (ft²)
- Edge Cracking (ft)
- Joint Reflection Cracking (ft)
- Lane/Shoulder Drop-Off (ft)
- Longitudinal/Transverse Cracking (ft)
- Patching and Utility Cut Patching (ft²)
- Polished Aggregate (ft²)
- Potholes (Count)
- Railroad Crossing (ft²)
- Rutting (ft²)
- Shoving (ft²)
- Slippage Cracking (ft²)
- Swell (ft²)
- Raveling (ft²)
- Weathering (ft²)

5.2 IRI Evaluation

Pavement roughness is typically represented by the IRI. The IRI measures how much vertical movement in inches is recorded in a traveled mile. The IRI is generally collected at traveling speed to simulate traffic conditions and provides an indication of ride quality. Pavement roughness generally develops due to rutting along wheel paths, depressions, potholes, and utility cut patches. Table 5-1 provides a range of values for the IRI.

Pavement Condition	IRI (in/mi)
Very Good	0 – 95
Good	96 – 169
Fair	170 – 219
Poor	220 – 279
Very Poor	>280

Table 5-1. IRI Pavement Rating

5.3 GPR Survey

Our GPR unit is manufactured by GSSI®. It transmits short electromagnetic pulses of radio frequencies into the pavement. The transmitted radio frequencies reflect to the unit, and the remaining frequencies continue to travel beyond the pavement surface. The system measures the time elapsed for transmission and reflection yielding profiles that are used to interpret pavement depth. This is repeated at short intervals while the vehicle is in motion resulting in a continuous profile of the pavement.

5.4 Asset Inventory Survey

AGW uses artificial intelligence (AI) to collect, process, and visualize data of transportation and infrastructure assets. Asset inventory is essential for street management to effectively install and maintain traffic control devices on public streets, bikeways, trails, etc. The AI software is capable of automatically detecting and classifying traffic signs in general conformance with the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) Manual for Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD). Other point assets such as light posts, utility poles, fire hydrants, etc., and line assets such as guardrails, medians, barriers, etc., are detectable using AI methods.

6.0 PAVEMENT EVALUATION RESULTS

6.1 Street Network

Alamosa County’s street network consists of local, minor collector, and major collector streets. Most of the street network is comprised of local streets (about 63%). Minor collectors make up 10% and major collectors comprise the remaining 27%. A breakdown of the roadway network is presented on Figure 6-1.

Street Network Distribution

AGW’s approach to addressing pavement maintenance and/or rehabilitation is based on Table 6-1. Preventive maintenance consisting of crack sealing, fog seals, and chip seals are generally recommended for pavements in satisfactory to good condition (PCI value of at least 71, i.e. showing little to no sign of distress). Minor and major rehabilitation consisting of structural overlays and patching are generally recommended for pavements in very poor to fair condition (minor – PCI values of 50 to 70 and major – PCI values of 26 to 49). Reconstruction is generally recommended for pavements showing major signs of distress and/or pavements that are beyond their service life (PCI value less than 26). These recommendations vary with each project and client.

Pavement Category	PCI Lower Limit	PCI Upper Limit	General Treatment
Good	86	100	Corrective Maintenance
Satisfactory	71	85	Preventive Maintenance
Fair	56	70	Resurface
Poor	41	55	Minor Rehabilitation
Very Poor	26	40	Major Rehabilitation
Serious	11	25	Major Rehabilitation
Failed	0	10	Reconstruction

Table 6-1. Pavement Maintenance Approach

6.2 PCI Results

The percentage of pavement distress was determined based on the area of distress divided by the total area of the analyzed segment. This percentage was utilized to determine the PCI of each segment. Computer software consisting of Road Doctor®, Paver 7.0®, and ESRI® were used in our calculations. An illustration of the overall roadway network PCI is presented on Figure 6-2.

Based on the analysis, the PCI of the network ranges from 19 to 100 with an average of 65 and a standard deviation of 15. Most of the street network is in fair to satisfactory condition. Specifically, the minor and major collector streets. The lower PCI values are concentrated in the local streets. A colored map indicating the PCI of the street network is shown on Figures 1 through 4.

6.3 IRI Results

The roughness data represented by the IRI, indicates that 50 to 70% of the street network has below fair ride quality. Damaged streets typically have an IRI of over 200 in/mi. Distresses affecting ride quality generally consist of cracking, rutting, patching, and depressions. Poor ride quality is typically tolerable by the driving public in local streets due to lower speed limits. In contrast, the driving public tends to be concerned about ride quality in collector streets due to the higher speed limits. The IRI rating distribution is shown on Figure 6-3.

IRI Rating Distribution

6.4 PCI and IRI Results

Figure 6-4 shows the average PCI and IRI of the street network. The PCI and IRI for minor and major collector streets are both in fair condition. The PCI and IRI for the local streets are in fair and poor condition, respectively. The data shows that the collector streets are performing better than the local streets. This is typical of street networks because pavement damage and poor ride quality are more of a concern in collector streets leading to maintenance and rehabilitation than less trafficked streets.

PCI and IRI Average Values

6.5 GPR Results

The GPR data indicated the asphalt pavement in the streets network ranges from 1.5 to 8.5 inches thick with an average of 5.1 inches and a standard deviation of 1.5 inches. Pavement thicknesses per street classification are shown in Table 6-2. The average pavement thickness per street segment is shown on Table A-1 of Appendix A. Variable thicknesses are likely a result of raveling, patching, cracking, excessive moisture in the subgrade or occasional deficiencies in data collected.

Street Classification	Average Thickness (in)	Minimum Thickness (in)	Maximum Thickness (in)	Deviation Thickness (in)
Local	4.9	1.5	8.1	1.5
Minor Collector	5.4	3.2	8.5	1.3
Major Collector	5.9	2.9	7.9	1.2

Table 6-2. Pavement Thickness per Street Classification

6.6 Asset Inventory Results

Part of the survey included inventorying the County’s traffic signs and pavement markers. Approximately 1,368 traffic signs and 242 miles of pavement markers were inventoried. A summary of the signs inventory is presented in Table B-1 of Appendix B. Each inventoried sign, MUTCD code, address, and street, are shown on Table B-2 of Appendix B. A summary of the pavement markers inventoried are shown on Table B-3 of Appendix B. A GIS shapefile was sent to Alamosa County representatives that includes the location of the signs and pavement markers.

7.0 PAVEMENT MAINTENANCE CONSIDERATIONS

Pavements are typically designed for a period of a minimum of 20 years. The environment can affect the performance of pavements in negative ways. Moisture and weather changes impact pavement strength, durability, and support. Figure 7-1 illustrates the deterioration of pavements indicating that the serviceability is on decline after construction. Pavement rehabilitation may cost four to five times more if not performed on time. It is essential that pavements be maintained so its its life can be significantly extended, however, there is a point where the life of the pavement cannot be extended further, and rehabilitation is needed. Reconstruction is needed for failed pavements with less than a PCI of 25.

The street network is in fair condition. Streets with below fair condition require proper maintenance to increase the PCI of about 40 to 50% of the collectors and 30% of the local streets. A variety of pavement management software area available in the market to develop a maintenance plan. The following maintenance alternatives are based on our experience and judgment with similar projects. However, local practices and preferred methods for maintenance and rehabilitation can be incorporated at any time. The alternatives can be modified per type or associated costs depending on budget. Our recommendations prioritize maintenance over rehabilitation and reconstruction directing focus toward streets that optimized preservation. The flow chart shown in Figure 7-2 was used in the decision-making process for maintenance and rehabilitation.

The results of the flow chart are shown on Table C-1 in Appendix C. The work plan was divided into six categories of priority. The network priority was assigned to each segment based on the PCI and IRI values. The priority rating does not mean that it must be immediately addressed. It only highlights where maintenance is more cost effective. Depending on the budget, the plan can be extended to 10 years. More information regarding local costs for materials and labor are needed for a cost estimate. A summary of the treatment, priority ratings, and areas (ft² and yd²) are shown in Table 7-1.

Treatment Type	Priority	Square Yards	Square Feet
2% full depth patching and seal coat	1 and 3	1,152,074	10,368,666
5% full depth patching and mill/overlay	1, 3, and 4	126,549	1,138,944
Crack sealing and 2% patching	2	1,281,442	11,532,982
Crack sealing as needed	6	415,467	3,739,200
Pavement Reconstruction	5	25,500	229,503
Total	–	3,001,033	27,009,296

Table 7-1. Treatment Summary

The information in Table 7-1 above can be used to estimate the cost of pavement maintenance operations. The estimate should include inflation factors or variabilities in materials and cost of construction. The PCI is assumed to reset to 100 for treatments including seal coats, mill and overlay, and reconstruction. However, the rate of deterioration for seal coats is a 5 to 8 PCI deduction per year. The rate of deterioration for mill and overlay is a 3 to 5 PCI deduction per year. The maintenance treatment can be modified per Alamosa County local practices. Additional treatment types can be implemented by Alamosa County. The priority rating is based on PCI and lot geographic location where resources can be used effectively. Available funding is needed to maximize cost effectiveness. Pavement reconstruction is very expensive and intrusive. One of the major distresses observed were transverse cracks which affects the ride quality of the pavement. Transverse cracks may be addressed with a mastic, crack filling, or wide crack repair. It appears certain street segments were allowed to deteriorate, since they are beyond their serviceability index where repair dollars spent are not maximized. Prioritization is given to streets where preventive treatments are feasible because they will be more cost effective.

7.1 Future Maintenance

Timely and proper maintenance during the life of the pavement is essential to reach the designed service life and possibly extend serviceability. We recommend implementing a maintenance program aimed at preserving the structural integrity of the pavement. The implementation of available maintenance operations varies depending upon pavement type and site conditions.

It is typical for new and resurfaced pavements to exhibit minor cracks within the first three years. Crack sealant should be used to reduce further deterioration and/or the potential moisture induced damage. The use of crack sealants may extend the life of the pavement by two to five years before any other treatment is applied. A variety of seal coats are available and can delay the need for a major surface structural treatment. Careful engineering judgment should be used to determine the type of seal application that is most appropriate. Seal coats should not be applied on pavements with severe cracks, raveling, or potholes. Fog seals typically have an estimated service life of approximately one to two years and should only be utilized on structurally sound pavements. Slurry seals generally have a service life of four to seven years and are commonly utilized on pavements exhibiting no to low pavement distress. Chip seals aid in slowing surface oxidation, minor raveling, and sealing small cracks. Chip seals are considered to have a service life of approximately four to seven years. Structural mill and overlay are rehabilitation techniques that generally occur within eight to 12 years after initial construction. This technique should only be utilized on stable pavements with minor surface distress and a strong base. Conventional structural mill and overlay operations are known to have a service life of eight to 14 years.

7.2 Risk of Inaction

Pavement serviceability is the ability of the pavement to serve the public. The lowest serviceability is the threshold where most of the public believes repairs are necessary to effectively use the facility. The risk of inaction is that the pavement will continue to deteriorate and be less serviceable to a point where the public will not be able to travel safely, and where the cost of maintenance significantly increases. We recommend preparing a yearly budget which addresses the maintenance necessary to preserve the pavement in the street network.

8.0 FUTURE MONITORING OF PAVEMENT

Future condition assessments are valuable information to establish a database to evaluate trends in pavement deterioration, perform budget estimates, enhance performance models, and treatment effectiveness. Pavement preservation assumes periodic maintenance and/or rehabilitation is necessary to maximize pavement performance. Pavement condition assessments of the roadway network are recommended every 2 or 3 years.

9.0 GENERAL DISCUSSION

Construction operations during maintenance, rehabilitation, or reconstruction of pavements often exceed the existing pavement load capacity. Pavement distress may occur on distressed or incomplete pavement structures due to construction traffic (e.g. heavy truck traffic). It is our recommendation to properly plan and budget for damages incurred by construction-related activities.

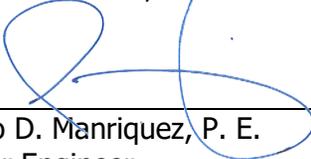

10.0 DRAINAGE CONSIDERATIONS

Long-term pavement performance is aided by proper drainage. Surface drainage is necessary for water to drain into the proper collection system instead of infiltrating into the subgrade soils below the pavement structure. If the pavement is not properly drained, the soils below the pavement structure will become saturated, and the subgrade will lose strength, ultimately affecting the performance of the pavement. A pavement drain system will aid pavement performance.
